

Person and Premises Search

This course introduces students to specialist search techniques used by law enforcement officers and we have designed a specific course to help deal any companies or education sector that have a search policy in place and need to improve the search procedures. The training can be used to train teachers, security officers and any other members of the company that may be called upon to carry out search procedures.

Under the Health and Safety at Work Act Section 2 and Employer Act, employees and employers have a duty of care not only to themselves and employee's but to the financial risk put upon the company by any claim or compensation on it as well as any media issues that may arise.

This course deals with the policy and procedures, laws and legislation as well as National and Government Guidelines in respect of search.

By having a sound knowledge of these laws and guidelines and the ability to recognise and respond effectively will provide and assist individuals and the organisation with the necessary confidence to search effectively.

Those who will benefit the most from this course are:

NHS Employees
Education Sector
Care Homes
Companies
Managers

This 1 day course can accommodate 16 students
